Multiple Species and Finishes

Beyond fine materials and exacting artistry, what ultimately sets our doors apart is their uniqueness

The door designs in this book are merely examples of what's possible. The ability to mix and match options, such as species, finish colors, metallic accents, floating panels and glass types allows you to create a one-of-a-kind door of your own. Choose one of the pictured door designs and select different species, add metallic accents or even glass – the choice is yours.

Door designs with glass inserts emphasize more than modern architecture's fondness for natural light and openness. They also provide character. For example, many of our designs with glass inserts include metal and wood accents for visual texture. Some of these elements appear to float on the glass, giving the doors a sense of lightness.

APPROPRIATE EXPOSURE

The protection of your door is a major factor in its maintenance requirements and longevity. To adequately protect your door and extend its life, several factors must be considered. Door type, climate, exposure, color choice and the use of a storm door all have an effect on the durability of a door. Every door type weathers differently. Wood doors, for example, are more susceptible to the elements than steel or fiberglass. The following are some guidelines for designing the best combination of door material, overhang protection, and other factors affecting the long-term performance of the door.

OVERHANG

An overhang as shown is required for wood doors, and recommended for steel and fiberglass doors. Overhangs protect the door's finish, minimize the need for refinishing and help keep the weather out of the home. An example formula for determining the correct overhang (in many climates) is: D (Depth) = $1/2H$ (Height).

For example, if the measurement from the base of the door to the bottom of the overhang is 10 feet, then the overhang should extend at least 5 feet. This formula can change based on the climate and the direction the door faces. The following section will explain how to modify the formula based on these factors.

CLIMATE & EXPOSURE

Also consider the variables specific to your region. The climate and the direction a door faces play a key role in determining a proper overhang. Typically, southern and western exposures are harshest. With southern exposures, the sun beats down on the door from sunrise to sunset. In western exposures, the door receives sunlight in the hottest part of the day.

Please consult the following chart and adjust the depth of the overhang as needed.

Climate	Direction the door faces
	North	South	East	West
Desert	$D = 1/2H$	$D = 2H$	$D = 1/2H$	$D = 2H$
Ocean	$D = 1/2H$	$D = H$	$D = 1/2H$	$D = H$
Wet	$D = H$	$D = H$	$D = H$	$D = H$
Mild	$D = 1/2H$	$D = H$	$D = 1/2H$	$D = H$

Without adequate overhangs, doors with a southern, southwestern, southeastern or western exposure will require more frequent maintenance. Doors without appropriate protection may also experience performance problems such as rapid finish deterioration, color fading, wood splitting, warping, moulding shrinkage, wood joint separation, and water penetration between the mouldings, panels, and glass.

With proper overhangs, doors may face any direction (north, south, east or west). Doors installed in these types of applications still require finish maintenance. Wood doors, for instance, may need to be refinished every two to five years.

your individuality.
